

A comprehensive knowledge base to help you understand multilateral environmental negotiations and related processes.

The new Negotiator's toolkit on InforMEA provides an array of resources on multilateral environmental negotiations, in relation to both the development of new agreements and the implementation of existing MEAs. These include: Training Materials, Rules of Procedure, Case studies, a Glossary of Terms, and the Negotiator's Handbook.

The recently updated Negotiator's Handbook provides a broad introduction to negotiating and working on Multilateral Environmental Agreements, but also serves as a key reference tool for even the most experienced negotiators. The toolkit features a user-friendly, interactive version of this handbook, with links to videos and further training materials and resources.

Negotiator's Toolkit

Training materials

Visit the training materials section to find a variety of resources relevant for multilateral environmental negotiations including e-learning courses, training presentations, manuals, videos, and MEA-specific information including links to COP decisions and documents.

Rules of procedure

The rules of procedure page has the UNEA and MEA rules of procedure all in one place so you can easily find the rules you need.

Case studies

The case studies page is a database of real and simulated examples of various negotiations from a number of MEAs across a range of environmental topics.

Glossary of Terms

The newly updated glossary is designed especially for negotiators of MEAs, and includes terms from the United Nations Treaty Collection Reference Guide, websites of the global MEAs, the UNITAR Glossary of Terms for UN Delegates, and literature on international negotiations and international law.
